

About the contributors

Roderick Beaton is Koraes Professor of Modern Greek and Byzantine History, Language and Literature at King's College London and Head of the Department of Byzantine and Modern Greek Studies there. He has published books and articles on Greek literature and oral tradition between the twelfth century and the present day, including An Introduction to Modern Greek literature (Oxford: Clarendon Press 1994).

Sophia Denissi studied at the Universities of Athens and Massachusetts and holds degrees in English and American literature. Since 1988 she has taught at the School of Fine Arts in Athens. Her research is mainly concerned with prose fiction of the nineteenth century. Her publications include: Το ελληνικό ιστορικό μυθιστόρημα και ο Sir Walter Scott, 1830-1880 (Athens: Kastaniotis 1994) and Μεταφράσεις μυθιστορημάτων και διηγημάτων 1830-1880: Εισαγωγική μελέτη και καταγραφή (Athens: Periplous 1995).

Michael Jeffreys is Professor of Modern Greek at the University of Sydney. His research and publications cover a wide spectrum of Byzantine and Modern Greek literature, from the Chronicle of John Malalas to the poetry of Yannis Ritsos. A particular focus of his interests is late Byzantine and early Modern Greek literature, on which he has published many articles and monographs. He is currently involved in a research project on the manuscript environment of late Byzantine vernacular literature.

Christopher Robinson is Professor of European Literature and Senior Tutor in Modern Languages at Christ Church, Oxford, his interests lying primarily in the literatures of Greece and France. His recent research has been centred on issues of sexual orientation and gender. His work includes a short study of the poetry of Cavafy (Bristol Classical Press 1988) and Scandal in the Ink: Male and female homosexuality in twentieth-century French literature (Cassell 1995).

Victoria Solomonidis studied at the Universities of Athens and London. Her research is particularly concerned with the Asia Minor Disaster, from the point of view of international relations and the structure of the Greek administration of Asia Minor. Her PhD thesis is entitled The Greek Administration of the Vilayet of Aidin, 1919-1922. Other research contributions include a detailed bibliography of the period, published in Modern Greece: A Social Science Newsletter, an annotated translation of G. Horton's The Blight of Asia, and articles on the controversial personality of the Smyrna High Commissioner Aristidis Stergiadis.
